THE CLOUD COLLECTOR

ARCHETYPE

You have saved a single memory of your existence prior to becoming sentient and free: You remember yourself catching scoffer monkeys in the house of a blood dressed in uniform. But now your days as a pest controller are over. Instead, you have dedicated your existence to the glorious task of documenting every sentient artificial life-form on Zira-Ka. Every scrap of storage except that first memory goes to your work. You get to go places and meet interesting machines. But the nanites fascinate you the most. You have learned to control them to some extent and even bonded with a minor cloud. But deep under their habits you detect a pattern, a presence of will and purpose across oceans of time. You are determined to learn more, no matter the cost to yourself.

Special: You have bonded with a beginner cloud. Log Files is built in. Your appearance is blood-like with remnants of an overall uniform, lots of modifications and worn parts—some covered with clothes, some not.

ARCHETYPE BOON

Artificial life-forms never attack you first. You have Shadow +1.
